WARNING: GRAPHIC CONTENT

Undercover TV is an innovative half-hour television program that shows viewers what the corporate-run media doesn't want them to see - the shocking animal abuse taking place every day behind the closed doors of factory farms, vivisection laboratories, fur ranches, puppy mills, and other exploitive industries.

Featuring video documentation captured by investigators who risk arrest to expose the dark reality deliberately hidden from the public, Undercover TV is a potent antidote to the silent suffering billions of animals endure every year.

Watch Undercover TV and learn the unbelievable truth about the abuse of other species for food, fabric, research and entertainment.

Undercover TV is broadcast on over 80 public access channels throughout the U.S. These stations are free of corporate advertising and influence, allowing Undercover TV to do what mainstream news shows cannot -- take an in-depth and unflinching look at today's most pressing animal protection issues:

Factory Farming - Every year in the U.S., about 10 billion cows, pigs, sheep, chickens, turkeys and other animals are raised and killed for food, treated as nothing more than machines for producing meat, milk and eggs.

Fur Production - Tens of millions of fox, mink and other species are bred in cages or painfully trapped in the wild to make fur garments.

Animal Experimentation - Animals of many species are routinely burned, blinded, poisoned and killed in laboratories for medical research and products testing.

Animals in Entertainment - Rodeos, circuses and marine parks force animals to perform for people's amusement using physical pain and intimidation.

Undercover TV's host - vegan spokesperson and bodybuilder Kenneth G. Williams.
